

About Dan Sullivan

Dan Sullivan has been director of Saving Communities since 1990 and president of the Council of Georgist Organizations since 2013. He has been advocating land value tax in an organized way since 1978, has made dozens of studies, and has been instrumental in bringing land value tax shifts to Pittsburgh, Clairton, McKeesport and Duquesne, all in Western Pennsylvania.

He has made studies of cities and boroughs, showing who paid more and who paid less, and, after passage of land value tax, how construction and renovation compared to non-LVT cities. He has written articles on various aspects of land monopoly, has spoken around the world, and has testified to state legislative and US Congressional committees. He transcribed the works of Henry George for the Robert Schalkenbach Foundation so they could be put online, and has helped plan most of the conferences of the Council of Georgist Organizations, and maintains this website.

Always seeking to rise above the false dichotomy of left vs. right and find the best in both, Sullivan was the head of the Allegheny County Greens in 1990-91 and of the Allegheny County Libertarians in 1998.

Endorsements

"Two leaders of the Georgist movement in Pittsburgh are Dan Sullivan, western regional director of the Incentive Tax League of Pennsylvania, and Democratic Congressman William J. Coyne. Sullivan has made several studies of the financial impact of higher land taxes on property owners, and speaks at meetings of Pittsburgh neighborhood and business groups to spread the incentive-tax doctrine. Such efforts are crucial. Few people, even among public officials and real estate executives, understand the nature of the tax and its economic ripples."

- Gurney Breckenfeld, real estate editor, Fortune, August 8, 1983

"Dan Sullivan knows more about tax economics than anyone I know."

- Jack Wagner, former Pennsylvania Auditor General

"Dan Sullivan is a competent advocate for the taxpaying public."

- Former Congressman Bill Coyne

"Dan Sullivan has a way of slicing through baloney that a deli manager would envy."

- Post-Gazette Columnist Brian O'Neill
